Haskett sentencing halted

Defence lawyer withdraws from case on principal

BY DAN SINGLETON
MVG Staff

The high-profile case of a Didsbury man charged in a horrific animal abuse case took an unexpected turn last Wednesday when his lawyer withdrew from the case on the day of sentencing.

Daniel Charles Haskett, 20, pleaded guilty in May to charges of causing unnecessary suffering to an animal and obstruction of police.

Defence lawyer Mark Takada told Judge Ian Kirkpatrick a discrepancy had arisen between an agreed statement of facts filed when Haskett pleaded guilty and what Haskett more recently told a psychologist preparing a pre-sentence report.

"I've either misled the court unwittingly by signing the agreed statement of facts or I would be misleading the court by saying that what he told the doctor is correct. I view it as my professional obligation to withdraw under those circumstances," Takada said following court.

"Mr. Haskett had told the psychologist his version of the events and that version differed significantly from the version of events that he signed, in the agreed statement of facts that was presented to court when he pleaded guilty."

A Lab-collie cross dog named Daisy Duke was found severely injured on a Didsbury street early on the morning of Oct. 8, 2006.

The dog's mouth and legs had been duct taped, a tow rope wrapped its neck, and it was suffering from a fractured skull, pelvis, lumbar spine, severe 'road rash' abrasions, and profuse bleeding.

In the agreed statement of facts, the accused admitted trying to kill the dog after it was run over by a 17-year-old young offender and friend outside the Haskett home.

The statement says after finding the dog "whimpering and cowering" under the vehicle, Haskett and the youth put a tow rope around the dog's neck and dragged it into the garage, "as they did not want to get blood on their clothing."

The statement says the pair then placed a plastic bag over the animal's head in an attempt to asphyxiate the animal, and when it resisted, Haskett duct taped its mouth and legs.

The dog was found by a bystander near the Haskett home. The attending veterinarian, Dr. Andy Mencarelli, euthanized the still conscious animal at the scene.

The psychological report has not been made public.

On Oct. 17 Judge Kirkpatrick granted Takada's application to withdraw from the case and adjourned the matter until Nov. 5 so Haskett can find a new lawyer.

ment of facts and he had the benefit of council when those facts were read in," Haight said following court.

Haight said he does not expect Haskett to be sentenced on Nov. 5, but rather that a new date may be set for a hearing to consider any application Haskett's new lawyer may make.

Following the dog's death Tamara Chaney, a Didsbury resident, spearheaded a petition that gather more than 110,000 signatures calling for tougher animal abuse laws. The petition was later tabled in the House of Commons.

Chaney was one of about a dozen animal rights activists who waived banners and

"Normally in a case like this there would be witnesses called and a hearing would be held and then the judge would have to decide what the facts are in this particular case," said Takada.

"Mr. Haskett has never said he wasn't guilty, it's just the facts around his involvement in the case that are contentious at this point."

Crown prosecutor Gord Haight said he will seek to have Haskett sentenced on the basis of the agreed statement of facts.

"My position, at least as it stands now, is that the accused has agreed in written form to all the fact in the agreed state-placards, and handed out flowers, outside the courthouse on Wednesday.

"This is ridiculous," Chaney said following court. "Where is the justice for Daisy Duke? I guess I had it in my head that there would be a sentencing, but no. It's disgusting."

Steve Carroll, chief executive officer of the Canadian Federation of Humane Societies, also attended last Wednesday's court session.

"We are very interested in the sentencing portion of this case," said Carroll.

Haskett faces a maximum penalty of six months in jail if convicted on the animal cruelty charge.

The young offender in the case, who cannot be named, pleaded guilty earlier to a charge of causing unnecessary suffering to an animal. He was placed on two years probation and ordered to complete 240 hours community service.

Judge Kirkpatrick has ordered Haskett to have no contact with the young offender.

Didsbury baby shaker gets 18 months jail

BY DAN SINGLETON
For the Review

A man who caused a 17-month-old Didsbury girl permanent brain, eye and ear damage while in his care three years ago showed no outward signs of emotion as he was lead from a Calgary courtroom in handcuffs following his sentencing on Oct. 19.

John Vachon, 24, of Red Deer, pleaded guilty June 1 to charges of criminal negligence causing bodily harm and failing to provide the necessities of life. He was sentenced by Justice Beth Hughes to 18 months in jail followed by two years probation.

Justice Hughes said the fact Vachon was in a position of trust when he injured the girl on Oct. 14, 2004 made jail time a necessity. The defence had asked for a conditional sentence.

The assault took place after Vachon dropped the girl on the floor of a Didsbury residence, causing her to lose consciousness. He then severely shook and struck her in the face in an attempt to revive her, causing her injuries in the process.

The girl's mother, an acquaintance of the accused, was not told by Vachon about the assault until days after the event.

Vachon was charged after officials at Alberta Children's Hospital in Calgary contacted police on Oct. 16, 2004 to report the girl's injuries. She cannot be identified.

Following Vachon's sentencing, the girl's family expressed frustration that it took three years to bring the man to final justice.

The girl's mother left the courtroom when Justice Hughes pronounced the sentence, and then sat crying outside the courtroom.

The injured girl's maternal grandparents said the girl continues to suffer health problems as a result of the attack.

"She's a slower learner than most kids because of this," her grandmother said following Vachon's guilty pleas. "She went into foster care because of her medical condition, so she will never be able to live with her older brother. It's been very hard on everyone."

BUSINESS OF THE YEAR — It is the special somethings that Claude and Margaret Baril, owners of Didsbury Pharmasave, and their staff offer customers that made them this year's Small Business of the Year winners.

Pharmasave takes top honours

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Margaret Baril's face filled with surprise and elation during the announcement and the roaring standing ovation that followed.

Margaret and her husband Claude Baril co-own Didsbury Pharmasave, which was selected by a three-member judging panel as the 2007 Didsbury Small Business of the Year, an honour announced at this year's Didsbury and District Chamber of Commerce Small Business Gala at the Didsbury Memorial Complex, Saturday night.

Speaking to the capacity crowd, Margaret said she was surprised and honoured to receive the distinction, especially considering the calibre of the other nominees.

"The reason that we are here is that we have an incredible staff who have been supportive and so wonderful to us and because of the community" she said.

"That's what has made us who we are. We consider the community and everyone here our friends. That's why we can give good service. When you're dealing with friends, it's a whole lot easier."

In an interview following the event, Claude echoed Margaret's sentiments on both community support and staff performance.

"It's a team effort," he said. "You can't just look at one person and say that's what made it possible. We have a such a dedicated staff."

Claude says the distinction inspires Pharmasave to continue its high standards of service.

Pharmasave was nominated by Frank and Frankie Kelly of Didsbury, sending a letter in support of the business.

"Pharmasave is deserving of the Small Business Award because their staff always greets customers in a friendly, positive, polite manner," the letter begins.

"The pharmacists do an excellent job and know each of their customers personally and take time to talk and explain the medications in a pleasant, understanding way." Margaret and Claude purchased Didsbury Drugs in 1993, changing names to Pharmasave in 2006, at a location that has had a drugstore since 1909.

Renovations were made to the front of their building a few years ago, with hope of capturing the spirit and look of Didsbury's main street, also making ongoing enhancements to the business' interior.

Other nominees for the award include Country Road RV, Front Porch Realty, Good Mahoney Lawson, JD's restaurant and Pub, the Didsbury Inn, and Mugs Coffee House.

Last year's winner was the Didsbury Review.

Library voted people's choice winner

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

A brightly-coloured box positioned near the Didsbury Municipal Library entrance didn't take long to go from hollow, to stuffed with support.

That support was what earned the library the Didsbury Chamber of Commerce 2007 People's Choice award.

The library edged reigning champion, popular coffee house "Mugs," and was presented with the honour during the Didsbury Chamber of Commerce Small Business Gala at the Didsbury Memorial Complex Saturday night.

Due to other promotional efforts through Canadian library month, which included forgiving late fees when books were returned, the library saw steady traffic, and apparently impressed people along the way.

Librarian Inez Kosinski, says the award means a lot.

"People can get tired and get worn out, and this is something that shows what we do is appreciated, which is really nice."

Outgoing chamber President Scott Puttick presented new chamber president Margo Ward, and Bill Ward with an award recognizing their long-standing excellence in business, owning and operating Ward's Value Drug Mart in Didsbury for 28 years.

"Margo and Bill Ward's contributions to our community cannot easily be measured," said Puttick.

"From political and organizing service, community group support, activity and event sponsorship ... Margo and Bill Ward have done it all."

"Through their service and commitment, they have contributed to sculpting Didsbury's past, constructing Didsbury's present, and paving Didsbury's future."

Margo says the special recognition caught her by surprise.

"I was shocked," she said.
 "I had no idea they were planning this."
 Margo says she and her husband will treasure the award.

"The first question that everyone asked when we sold the store was, 'are you moving out?' No, this is our home, we're not going anywhere."

Didsbury Mayor Dorothy Moore, Mountain View County Reeve Al Kemmere, and MLA Richard Marz also spoke at the event, sharing their fondness and appreciation for the work done by those involved in small business.

"I encourage you to do what it takes to make small businesses prosper, and that's support small businesses," said Kemmere.

"If you run one yourself, make sure you support the other businesses in your town." I encourage you to be positive about the future, move into the future and embrace it. Let's build an even stronger community than we have right now."

Moore discussed the Didsbury municipal development plan, and touched on the subject of large franchises moving to Olds.

"Some of you may see the big-box stores coming to Olds and Balzac as a threat," she said.

"Some may see the potential growth of Didsbury's commercial and retail sector as competition within your own market. The growth of more choices for shoppers within our region should actually provide a reason for customers to avoid a trip to the cities."

Marz hinted at an announcement by the provincial government that will be revealed later this week.

"We're going to make sure that businesses continue to prosper," he said.

"I have done everything in my power to make sure this is going to happen. I have had my input into this. I'm looking forward to the announcement and am sure you're all going to be quite pleased with it."

Small schools rural gems

JOANNA BEZJACK

While once a common sight on the Alberta prairies, tiny rural schools educating the children of close-knit farming communities are slowly disappearing from our landscape.

The small schools, many of which have closed in recent years due to small student populations and old facilities in need of updates, have been pushed aside in favour of busing children to larger schools to complete their elementary and high school education.

School boards explain that the closures come down to dollars and cents and say that larger institutions are more viable because funding allocated is based on the number of students.

However, many parents of students in small rural schools say that larger schools are not the answer and that they want to keep their children where they are.

Midway school located between Carstairs and Didsbury on the east side of the QEII is currently facing an unknown future itself.

The Chinook's Edge school board has been conducting a viability study on the 38-student school, with a final decision on whether the school remains open or closed scheduled for April.

This study, and its looming decision, have many parents and community members frustrated that the board has turned its back on small schools and ignores their enviable features and unique educational benefits.

I am in no position to say whether Midway school is economically viable or not, nor do I envy the board's difficult decision. I understand that for a school to remain open it must have the funding to maintain facilities and staff, but I also have personally experienced the benefits of small classes and can't say enough good things about small rural schools.

I attended a small K-12 school in rural Saskatchewan in the village of Marengo and graduated in a class of only 12 people. The school, which had around 150 students, was made up of mostly farming children and kids from nearby small towns that couldn't support a school of their own.

For me, and many of the students and parents, the school was the centre of the community and a common ground for students who lived as far as 50 km away from each other.

We benefited from small class sizes, one-on-one instruction, and teachers who knew each and every one of us by name.

We were also relieved of many of the pressures of large schools such as bullying, violence, and cliques because we all knew each other so well and each other's families. You needed each kid's participation to have a game of kickball or a basketball team so no one was excluded.

I also believe that because none of my fellow students and I were ever overlooked or able to slip through the cracks we all developed a strong sense of self – no one could hide away in a large circle of friends or get away with not expressing their opinion.

We were also all encouraged to play all possible school sports, join the drama club and play in the school band so that the school teams and groups would have enough numbers and be possible – this necessary participation taught us to try new things and sometimes sacrifice our needs and wants for the betterment of the group.

There is also something to say about having to sit in class with, and socialize with, the same small group of people for several years. It really allows you to learn how to get along with other people you may have differences with and to accept them for who they are.

It's a shame that my children may never have the opportunity to attend a small rural school where they will feel safe, accepted and are allowed to be themselves, but I hope that some small schools will be able to stay alive and maintain a long-standing rural tradition.

Letter to the editor

What about the rest of the team?

Dear Editor:

I wanted to read this week's article about the Didsbury Dragons before I wrote this letter.

I want to commend all of the players on this team for their devotion and efforts to this team.

I feel that on any team there is a star, but to my knowledge one athlete does not win the game any more than one soldier wins the war.

I would like to see a picture of all the players. I would like to know their names. I would like to hear about their contributions.

Please remember, when reporting on this team, everyone is important. Everyone deserves a little credit.

It is my experience that it is not very fulfilling to continue your efforts on a team if you are never acknowledged.

CTF to candidates: Time to show your donors

EDMONTON: The Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF) is calling on candidates in Alberta's nine largest municipalities (Calgary, Edmonton, Strathcona County, Red Deer, Lethbridge, Wood Buffalo, St. Albert, Medicine Hat and Grande Prairie) to disclose their campaign contributors before the October 15th ballot.

"In civic politics there are no political parties and no tax-receipts for donations, as such, many of those who donate often do so in hope of gaining influence over decisions at city hall," stated CTF-Alberta director Scott Hennig. "Letting voters know who is funding these campaigns before they vote, lets voters know who will be 'pulling the strings' after they vote."

Successful civic election campaigns in Alberta's major municipalities are becoming expensive to run, meaning candidates either have to be independently wealthy or they have to have individuals, companies or unions footing the bill.

In the 2004 civic election, successful candidates for city council spent on average nearly $36,000 in Edmonton to and on average over $44,000 in Calgary to get elected.

Edmonton Mayor, Stephen Mandel, spent over $479,000 last election on his campaign and in 2001, Calgary Mayor, Dave Bronconnier, spent nearly $835,000 on his campaign.

Even in smaller cities, the costs and contributions can add up. In St. Albert last election, Mayor Paul Chalifoux spent nearly $27,000 on his campaign, and on average, city councillors spent over $7,000 each. In Lethbridge, Mayor Bob Tarleck spent over $41,000 last election on his campaign.

"Already there have been some very large donations made in this election, voters shouldn't have to wait until after the election to find out who is making them and in what amount," continued Hennig.

Only six of the nine largest municipalities have any disclosure by-law (Calgary, Edmonton, Strathcona County, Red Deer, Lethbridge and St. Albert), all of which only require the disclosure be provided well after the election.

A handful of candidates have already disclosed their contributors, including Lewis Cardinal (Edmonton - Ward 4), Jag Aithal (Calgary - Ward 7), George Chahal (Calgary - Ward 3), and Brian Pincott (Calgary - Ward 11).

"These candidates are to be commended for their commitment to transparency and accountability, but their disclosure should be the rule not the exception," concluded Hennig.

Engineering a mayoralty race campaign

Shane Neufeld discusses strategy in the Didsbury, Olds races

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

On a mid-September evening, Shane Neufeld and his young son decide to go for a walk.

It's a few days prior to nomination for the municipal election, when the general public learns if there will be a race for a spot on town council, or perhaps even for mayor.

But Neufeld already knows a mayoralty race is in the cards.

Before long, he and his son reach their destination and are welcomed by the towering man they were anxious to see.

Didsbury deputy mayor Brian Wittal gives the two a warm greeting and invites them into his home.

"I wanted to let him know that I was there for whatever help he needed," said Neufeld, who joined the team Wittal assembled to challenge incumbent Dorothy Moore.

For a man that has never dipped his toe in an election of any kind, Neufeld was fully-immersed in the mayoralty race in not only Didsbury, but Olds too.

A resident of Didsbury, Neufeld logs his work hours in Olds where he is employed by the wife of 12-year Olds town council fixture Kris Bojda.

Through that relationship Neufeld became acquainted with Bojda and was also quick to volunteer his efforts to his cause.

Bojda and Wittal formed a friendship through their time served on the Mountain View Regional Emergency Services board and not only kept in contact, but also shared synergies during their respective mayoralty races, says Neufeld.

"There was a lot of idea-sharing."

One idea that proved to be an effective method for both candidates to reach a widespread audience was suggested by Bojda's son Nick - Facebook.

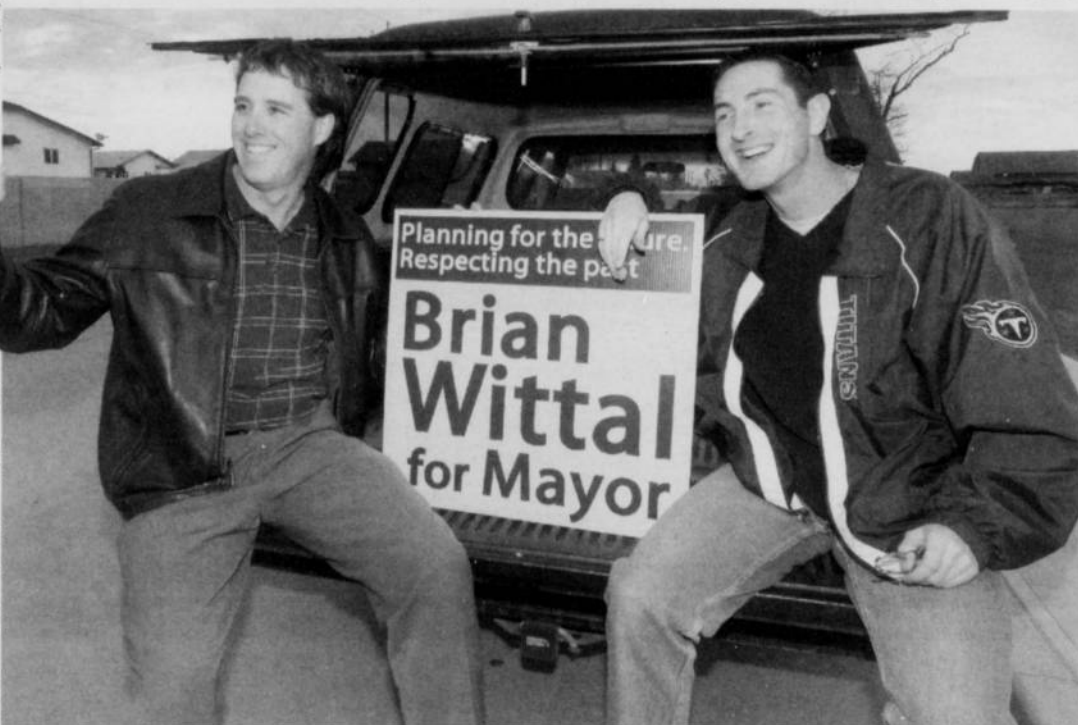

"I liked the idea for Brian, because he wanted to find a way to engage younger voters," he said.

Neufeld launched the two on the trendy website where members can keep in touch through messages, photographs, and even belonging to groups where like-minded individuals show their support for everything benefit, didn't stop at the keyboard.

Meetings in Wittal's warroom were followed by a traditional campaign method - presenting candidate mate-

from favourite bands to favourite vacation spots, to politicians.

Interest levels for both candidates increased as Neufeld used the Facebook groups to update cyber-surfers on all things Wittal and Bojda.

But Neufeld's contributions, particularly to Wittal's rial to people at their homes.

"You walk around with your book and you feel like people are thinking 'oh, who's coming to our door? Loiterers? solicitors?'"

"That part was intimidating."

But Neufeld was quick to get over his insecurity.

"People were very friendly," he says. "People weren't necessarily willing to say 'yeah, Brian!'"

Instead, Neufeld explains, they'd say with a smile and nod, "yes, we've made our decision."

Which, at the time, was hard for him to read.

Due to time constraints with helping raise a young family Neufeld didn't "door-knock" in Olds, but proudly displayed one of Bojda's signs in the window of his vehicle.

"I felt kind of awkward," laughed Neufeld. "I'd drive home and have 'Bojda for mayor' in my vehicle parked in front of my house and some people probably thought 'there's another guy going for mayor?'"

As a dual-campaign member, that meant double-duty for the all-candidates forum in both Didsbury and Olds.

To a turnout that was approximately half the size of the showing in Didsbury, Neufeld watched anxiously as Dahl and Bojda took the stage.

"It felt like the first soccer game of the season," he said.

"It's a competition. Being a team member for the competition, you're out there and on the line."

"You want your candidate to do the best they can, and you're nervous for them. You feel like any wrong move can just sink the whole ship."

First up was the most significant count, votes from the polling station at the Olds Legion.

"Everybody's quiet, and as they post the numbers up on the board," Neufeld's expression reflects his disappointment from the experience.

"To be down 350 votes at that point, how can you overcome that?"

"I really think Olds lost something. Especially since he won't be a councillor. He's gone."

I don't know if some people recognize that. Some think 'they're going for mayor and they're a councillor, if they don't get that promotion they might drop back down to councillor.' I think he's going to be really missed."

Winded from the result in Olds that ended Bojda's run, Neufeld's thoughts turned to Wittal who planted himself at the Didsbury Memorial Complex where the votes were being sorted.

Witnessing the daunting task of attempting to defeat an incumbent, Neufeld was concerned.

Knowing Neufeld's connection to Wittal, someone at Bojda's office asked him how he thought the Didsbury election would finish.

"I said, 'I don't think he has a hope,' and I was very sad to say it," confessed the eight-year Didsbury resident.

A short time later, Neufeld's cellphone rings and Wittal's on the line.

Requisite election commotion muffles the conversation as he strains to hear what Wittal has to say.

"I hear him thanking someone," recalls Neufeld. "Then I hear him souvenir.

The morning after the election, Neufeld grins as he picks up his copy of the Didsbury Review.

The front page showed the blissful new mayor and one of his biggest backers, Gayle Veno under a bold headline that read "Wittal Wins!"

"I thought, 'I really need to keep this as a reminder of my first step into politics.'"

Neufeld considered vying for a spot on council, but with family obligations he decided it wasn't the right time.

With Wittal as mayor, returning council member Veno, and new addition to council Rick Mousseau, of whom he glowingly speaks after serving under him during a stint with the Didsbury Volunteer Fire Department, he feels content with the present decision makers.

"Over the next three years, I think Didsbury is in good hands."

What's in a name?

Ghostpine Creek/Pine Lake

Ghostpine Creek flows southeast into the Red Deer River, approximately 80 kilometres northeast of Calgary.

On the shores of Pine Lake around 1830 the Blackfoot raided a sleeping camp of Cree and murdered every man, woman and child.

Only one Cree survived, having been away from the camp on a hunting expedition.

When he returned and found all his family and friends murdered, the Cree painted his face black in mourning then set out on the trail of the Blackfoot.

The lone Cree managed to kill many of the rivals, raiding their camps at night or else ambushing anyone who became separated from the main group.

For years afterwards the Cree avoided Pine Lake.

An odd-looking tree guarded its shores and people thought the region was haunted by ghosts of those who were murdered.

This explains the original name of the feature, Ghostpine Lake.

The Ghostpine Creek flows from here and forms a junction with the Red Deer River, shortly after joining the Three Hills Creek.

Labour help needed in museum renovation

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

The Didsbury Historical Society is one step closer to organizing much-needed renovations at its museum.

The Town of Didsbury has thrown its support behind the cause, granting the group $25,000.

"In my opinion, if this work is not done, it will deteriorate quickly, which is very sad," said town CAO Roy Brown.

Council member Bob Davidson agreed.

"This is a destination," he said. "It's one of the draws in the community. It's not just a local thing that people go see, it brings in people from other communities."

Secretary with the historical society, Joan Court, says they hope to turn the $25,000 into Community Facility Enhancement Program (CFEP) grant that would bring in $125,000.

To qualify for the grant, they need to raise half the funds on their own.

"Right now we're a little shy," said Kourt.

Aside from cash, work from skilled labourers is also considered in the collection for just over $62,000.

Court says a qualified laborer would log the equivalency of $30 an hour and an apprentice would be worth $20 an hour, according to CFEP rules.

"But, it's easier said than done," said Court.

Court says the historical society has struggled to get an electrician to provide a quote on the renovations.

Town development officer Robert Wigg has inspected the area and provided his estimate on the cost, which Kourt says has been helpful.

Aside from electrical work, Kourt says a priority for the renovations will be the museum eavestrophs.

The historical society hopes to have what it needs for its application in about a month.

Thank You

To the residents of Didsbury I want to say Thank you.

Thank you for showing your commitment to Didsbury by having a say in the future of our Town by voting yesterday.

To all those who helped me in my campaign, a special thank you. I would not have been able to accomplish this without your hard work, support and tireless efforts on my behalf.

I would also like to thank Mayor Moore and the previous Council for their hard work and dedication that helped to set the foundation for Didsbury's future growth.

I will commit my best efforts to you as your Mayor, as we work together to build Didsbury's future, for the benefit and enjoyment of all residents.

Sincerely
Brian Wittal

Bill 46 Restricts Landowner Rights

Bill 46 is new legislation that the Government of Alberta has tabled as part of the EUB restructuring. This Bill will govern the construction of all pipeline, transmission lines and power plants in the Province of Alberta. If this Bill is implemented a power plant, transmission line or pipeline may have been approved on your land without a hearing being held, and there is no right to appeal the decision. This law will prevent any public input and already has had first reading in the Spring sitting of the Legislature. It could be implemented early in November 2007 and will take effect January 1, 2008, but is retroactive to 2003.

Some excerpts from the act are:

Section 9(1) authorizes the Commission to make an order or decision "... without giving public notice and without holding a hearing.

Section 9(4) gives the Alberta Utilities Commission the power to prevent landowners and consumers from making verbal representations even if a hearing is held.

Section 9(4) restricts the ability of landowners to hire outside legal counsel when intervening in regulatory hearings

Section 98(2) makes the Bill retroactive to June 1, 2003.

An informational meeting sponsored by the Westcott UPTAG group will be held on OCTOBER 25th, 2007 at 7:30 p.m. in the DIDSBURY HIGH SCHOOL.

Mr. Joe Anglin of the Lavesta Group will be the guest speaker.

More information about the Bill 46 is also available on the web at www.killbill46.ca.

He also suggests that you question the store clerk if they request to take a second swipe of your card.

If you believe you are the victim of card-skimming, notify your bank immediately, said O'Dwyer.

Didsbury Bull Bash expected to draw many

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Mark VanTienhoven is continuing a series of high-profile bull riding events with a World Professional Bullriding meet at the Didsbury Agri-Plex Oct. 27 at 4 p.m.

VanTienhoven's series started with successful shows in Rimbey and Airdrie and he says he expects another strong turnout in Didsbury.

The event will draw 30 bull riders and is developing a reputation for its dazzling pyrotechnics and booming sound system, says VanTienhoven.

Only 1,000 tickets will be made available for the event and VanTienhoven says he expects it to not only draw Didsbury bull riding fans, but those in from neighbouring towns

"The most exciting part of a rodeo is bull riding, so for me to bring excitement, and that's it, is awesome."

MARK VANTIENHOVEN

such as Crossfield, Carstairs, and Olds.

VanTienhoven is known in these parts for his work as the rodeo clown at the Didsbury rodeo.

His family is from Carstairs and says he's familiar with what people in the area are looking for.

"I thought Didsbury needs bullriding," he said.

"This is my style of bull riding. First class."

"The most exciting part of a rodeo is bull riding, so for me to bring excitement, and that's it, is awesome."

Every event VanTienhoven hosts, he puts a portion of money earned from ticket sales into a local cause, with Didsbury FCSS slated to benefit from the proceeds.

Dragons a strong presence at provincials

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Three Didsbury High School runners participated in the cross-country provincials in Canmore this weekend.

Zac McCargar, placing 18th of 120 runners was the top finisher of the Didsbury entrants.

Earl Blakely and Yasmine Voegeli also had strong showings, said coach Mark Leggette.

"It was a really tough course, but they did well," he said.

Although the terrain wasn't overly-friendly, Voegeli said things went well.

"The track was pretty hilly," she said.

"But it was a good run."

The cross-country team starts its work in September, participating in a Counties meet in Sundre, where the top 15 then advance to zones.

Schools stretching from Olds to Okotoks participate in the south-central Zones, where they again have to finish as one of the top 15 runners for a ticket to provincials.

"It's amazing," said Leggette. "Very few kids get to go to provincials. Just that they made it that far is quite the accomplishment. They're running with some of the best in the province."

The cross-country team practices twice a week, in addition to runners putting in training on their own time.

Blasted in Blackfalds

Colts struggle on the road

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

The Mountain View Colts hit a rough patch in their attempt to climb the powerhouse-stacked Lakes Division standings.

That rough patch was the defining Heritage Junior League champion, Blackfalds Wranglers, formerly of Lacombe.

The Wranglers, noted for their offensive prowess, showed their scoring touch in an 11-3 romp over the locals, in Blackfalds Oct. 16.

Veteran forward Jeff Clazie said the rink was an adjustment for his team.

"They have a much bigger ice surface than what we are used to playing on," he said.

While the score suggests complete control by the home team, the Colts showed plenty of life in the first period. Colts forward Brad Edwards opened the scoring on the power play, with assists credited to Clazie and J.R. DeFoe.

Goaltender Evan Miller, of Carstairs was also impressive in the opening stanza, allowing only one goal, while his team was outshot 19-7.

"We had a really good first period and then we started to tire out and then they started walking all over us," said Clazie, a Didsbury resident.

The Colts actually improved defensively in the second period, restricting the shot count to 15-8 in favour of the Wranglers.

However, the floodgates opened for six Blackfalds goals, including two short-handed markers in the second period.

The only Didsbury goal of the second period was from Eric Becker, who notched his second goal of the regular season at 9:12, assisted by Edwards and Dylan Perry.

Becker would strike again at the 4:30 point of the third period, with Edwards getting his third point of the game with an assist and Tim Phillips the other assist.

Didsbury again improved their defensive play, cutting the shots to 13-7 for the Wranglers in the period.

The Colts allowed the Wranglers to go on the power play nine times during the game, capitalizing on two of their opportunities.

The game left Mountain View with a record of 2-2-1, placing them fourth in the Lakes Division standings, one point behind Blackfalds.

The Colts' next challenge is the Maskwacis Attack, an opponent they will face in Hobbema Oct. 24.

The Attack sit fourth in the Prairie Division standings with a record of 0-5.

180. Thank You

The Didsbury Aqua Jets had an awesome season thanks in part to the skilled coaching of Ryan Tracey and Twyla Osh. They attended every meet and encouraged the swimmers to do their best. Ryan and Twyla were a great asset to the Jets, and it showed at how well the swimmers did at the meets. The club greatly appreciated and wants to say thanks for all the support from numerous local clubs and families this summer. Their generous donations helped to enhance team spirit during our competitions. The kids were so proud to wear the Aqua Jets colours as a team. The board and parents are very proud of all the swimmers who worked hard throughout the season. They cheered each other on and supported one another. We know they gave it their all and always kept smiling. Which helped the Aqua Jets shine at every meet.

A big thank you to the dedicated parents. Their volunteer efforts and support of this great sport was inspiring. We held a meet this season for the first time in four years and it's success is proof of the great team we have. We want to say how proud we are of all the kids of the Aqua Jets. We are very proud of Kirsten Kurtz and William Gingell. They both medalled at Provincials in Calgary this summer. William in his first year and Kirsten in her last year, we are going to miss her and her awesome strokes and big smile.

Thank you

The family of Mary Hengen who resided in the long term care unit 4 would like to thank the doctors, nurses, staff, and volunteers for the exceptional, passionate care she received. We will never forget you. The Hengen Family
